Daughters to Have Day;
It's July 22

Establishment of a national Daughters day, to "provide a day in which mothers and daughters may create a bond of closer intimacy," will be sponsored next July 22 by the American Gold Star Mothers, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Effie Fletcher, Los Angeles president of the organization.

"On this day the barriers of age difference and necessary respect will be dropped," Mrs. Fletcher said. "Mothers and daughters are being encouraged to spend the day together, discuss their viewpoints and iron out any little difference that may exist."

"Unlike Fathers day or Mothers day, this day will not be marked by any exchange of presents," she added. "The most precious gift will be found in a closer intimacy, a better and longer understanding between children and their parents."

A nationwide celebration will mark inauguration of the new holiday, Mrs. Fletcher said.
